CLARIFYING SUGAR BY SOAP. The new process invented by Mr. Garcia. a Louisiana sugar-refiner, has been brought under the notice of the French Academy of Sciences at Paris, by M. Basset. It is founded on the well known property of lime which combines with fatty substances, whether free or transformed into alkaline soaps. When the saccharate of lime is brought into contact with a dissolution of soap of soda, the sugar is set at liberty, the lime combines with the seid of the soap, and the soda remains in dissolution in the liquid. When the clarification has effected with an excess of Lime and the liquid has Class 17, to be drawn in the city of Augusta, been skimmed a first time, it is allowed to cool to 104 degrees below Fahrenheit, and the solution of soap is then poured in, the liquid being gently stirred all the while .--When the whole has been well incorporated, it is brought again to the boiling point, after which the temperature is suddenly lowered again by the suppression of the steam current, and the new scum is removed. The latter consists entirely of a calcareous sonp, 300 which, in rising to the surface, has carried 125 away with it all the impurities and extrane-100 ous sub-tances contained in the liquid, and has an excellent taste.
